

A Tragic, Yet TRUE Story From A Friend Of Mine

OK, Monday morning I went to Lowe's and saw a guy named Floyd (he helped people load and brought in carts) standing outside the doors by himself, I really felt the Holy Spirit prompting me to witness to him, I kind of shrugged it off. Then the Holy Spirit said to me, "at least give him a Gospel tract". Again I ignored it, and went about my business. I went back in Lowe's later Monday but didn't see Floyd around (didn't think much of it).....

Friday morning I was back in there and one of the cashiers says "Did you hear about Floyd?" I said, "No, why what's up?" She said, "He died in the parking lot Monday afternoon. Someone found him out there just laying in the parking lot and called 911."

Folks, I had talked to Floyd countless times, I had felt prompted 3 or 4 times to talk to him and I never even gave him a Gospel tract. Judging from the things that came out of his mouth, there is not much doubt that he was not a Christian.

Folks this hurts so much to type this, to even just think about it. I beg you don't ignore the Holy Spirit when you feel Him prompting you to talk to someone. I pray none of you have to go through what I am right now. You never know when you could be the last "lifeline" in someone's life. I don't feel condemned, but I know I let God and Floyd down. I definitely have been extremely convicted over this, I was in the same Lowe's today w/my wife and was able to talk w/one of the other guys I've been friendly with about the Gospel.

I am so unworthy to be a follower of Christ's but His love is so amazing that I know He still loves me in spite of all my faults and disobedience.

Thank you Jesus for your mercy, grace and forgiveness.
